Description: Taken from fresh research into the North American smart buildings industry, this presentation will detail drivers of smart-system adoption, deterrents to adoption, the building systems most commonly equipped with intelligence, plans for future adoption and more. The data incorporates responses from a cross-section of the professional ecosystem serving smart buildings. The presentation provides insights into the property types with the highest prevalence of smart systems, factors affecting the decision to invest in smart technologies, and capabilities that users expect to gain by incorporating smart systems.
